course despite the come back of the Democrats in the recently held US mid-term polls; and

(b) what implications the recently held North Korean Nuclear test would have on the Indo-US Nuclear treaty and of the possibilities of Iran venturing a nuclear device test in the near future?

THE MINISTER OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS (SHRI PRANAB MUKHERJEE): (a) The Indo-US nuclear understanding enjoys broad bipartisan support reflected in the large majorities by which both Republicans and Democrats voted in favour of the Bills to enable full civil nuclear energy cooperation with India in the US House of Representatives and the Senate. Out of 201 Democrats in the House of Representatives, 140 voted in favour of the Bill. In the Senate, where the vote took place after the mid-term election results were announced, 32 out of 44 Democrats voted for the Bill. Support from the Democrats included senior Democratic leaders in both the House.

(b) The India-US nuclear understanding is based on its own merits with a view to addressing India's growing energy requirements. It cannot be linked either to North Korea's nuclear test or Iran's nuclear policy.
